

SKATE FATE

AMERICA'S FAVORITE!!
FOR OVER 3 YEARS!

Wild Hairs

Balma now has a brand new Honda interceptor cycle. What next? Why doesn't he stop?

Question: How many skaters have lived at Tracker?

Answer: More than you ever hoped.

Neil Blender is a litterbug.

They installed parking bump coping ontop of one wall at Del Mar's popular banked reservoir.

Stacy's apartment is cleaner than you had heard. His pool is skatable but filled.

Lance Mountain is in Sweden along with McGill.

One of the best ditches is in Morgan Hill. It has a shallow end, deep end, parking bump coping, and a hip. All with round transitions and 10 ft. of flat. I would suggest that you visit it.

ISSUE NUMBER 37 JULY 1984

ON THE FRONT- Three solid years of consistent monthly skate communication. This is the tradition of "America's favorite" skate rag, SKATE FATS! Mike McGill skids across the jagged rim of the Dolphin pool, part of a secluded Nor-Cal abandoned punk rock hangout, another version of skid row.

Hi Lin.

What?

Low low.

Crapface.

How long?

I got a Gomez model a year ago on my birthday, so I guess a year now.

Good, good. That's good, geek.

Wait.

(Ten minutes pass without a word spoken. Lin scratches his shoulder with a puzzled look on his face and says:)

My name's Lin. My parents never understood my humor or me as a person. I'm not obnoxious or rude. Girls seem to want to kiss me at odd times.

How do you feel about this?

I will ride anything. I will try anything I feel. I don't know what a trick is. I just get on my board and start frabbing anywhere, and whatever feels like it might work, does. And that to me is all I care about.

Why rails in pieces going the wrong direction on your board?

How can you even say what's the so-called wrong direction?

You're right. I'm a dick and shouldn't even of asked that question.

It's yourself that makes you.

Where do you live?

I live with my parents who constantly put down my behavior such as you do. I will be moving to my grandma's house in Los Trim in a month.

How did you meet Jipo?

I stopped on my paper
route at Lear's sandwich shop to eat. Jipo was there with these small ramps. I said "I've got a board at home". He said he's got a ramp. I didn't really care.

I told him. An hour later,
I found myself skating
verticle.

Is that the first time?

Yes, man.

What do you think of Coonson and Jipo's ability?

You mean skate?

Presicely.

I guess they're good skaters.
I don't really care though.
I like 'em as friends. I hope they feel the same toward me.

Mail Grab

Gary: I've been wondering for a bit, when the devil is Tracker gonna make a bigger truck? And don't give me any "it's good enough for Claus Grabke, it's good enough for all" kind of soundings. There is a need in their line for a wider support beam. The naked truth shines in the neon signs of one million sauerkraut balloons. I haven't been in the water for quite some time. It's too cold and I'm too warm. (The big lake that is). I bought you a postcard in Milwaukee but lost
it. 10 phantom pennies float in limbo. The Beaudouins weren't home and I couldn't find their house.

Hey 100 bucks for fifth,
good shot, dude! Maybe I should come out there and show
'em my version of fleet feet set spogabo. No, real serious
now. I heard from a pal I went to school w/ recently who is now living in S.D. area who has his own business refinish ing sailboats. He said he could use a good man like me.
He also said that he pays 210
per hour. Pie in the sky? 5 hour fudge, perhaps? I dunno.
I may chucker out. One of my old room-mates lives there too, I correspond with him frequent like. "When the lights go down in the city, when the sun shines by the bay..." (Journey, a song from the "Departure" album, 1978)

So jah I may skate the Shell Bowl yet. Would this be all right? Are there any big, beefy locals with chitinous outer shells that are gonna "crash my ass"?
(Haw!) Oh bother. You be good, no, be better. Be humble. This is Gene Rayburn signing off for match book 85.

P.S. Do you know how to get a hold of a publication called "Skate Stars" out of Wash? An address might work.
Did you see that zine thing in Thrasher? No addresses.
Talk about let's keep it in the family. Jeesh. If this info is in a recent TWS, never mind.

A CHANNEL OF INFORMATION

After viewing so many pages of so many issues of so many skate rags, mags, pamphlets, leaflets, brochures, flyers, and price lists, can it still be found necessary to continue writing down words and clicking off photos of the continuous old skate tricks, spots, riders, and so on. Heck, who knows? Does anyone? Should anyone? Have we yet reached the point where all of the mags and issues and articles and layouts and photos all look very similar each time. I'm not saying anything, except this: We will continue to throw Skate Fate in your direction for as long as there is the money around my way to print it. We try each month to bring you all of the startling graphics, unusual photos, penned drawings, and non-burned out words directly to your mail box. Who cares if it's only 10 pages long? It sure is better than nothing. Just keep in mind to stick around and be sure to keep in tune to this channel.

HOME SWEET HOME

Home is where your heart is. Or perhaps home is where you find it. That is the case with quite a few individuals of the curious lot known as "skate-boarders."

Ugly times do come around occasionally as you may well know. And skaters (dealers with reality as they may be known) will do whatever they must to continue doing what they like a lot. Skate.

Food, a home, and social interaction all often seem to take a back seat to the ever-captivating act of aggressive skating. If a home, for some reason, cannot be had, the skaters will find their way. They always seem to make it through their blackest hour, no matter what the opposing odds.

For example, Todd Wessloh, a tearing verticaller at the skate ranch, recently lived in his car for a spell somewhere in the Del Mar Area. Dave Mock (visiting from Australia) did the same during his 6 month stay in So. Cal. Corey O'Brien now literally lives in a tent in his grandmother's garage in San Jose. There are other examples too, but by now you should be getting the picture.

Some might choose to wonder: "What is to become of them?" The skaters. The ones that teeter on the edge of catastrophe each time they so much as take a push. Anything can happen. Screech on a twig? Slam time. They often get kicked out of Denny's, smoke dirt, stage dive, get chased by cops, yell at and get yelled at by the hordes of pedestrians, and in general, thrive on a very fast paced way of living. So "what is to become of them?" you might wonder. Well heck, what's to become of everyone? It could all be over any minute now. Okay, I've got some news. Feeling sorry, clogging your brain up, or moving slow isn't going to make it. Experience all that you can now and ride as fast as you want to.

CHEAPEST TALK

All I know right now is that I have been hearing the word "fuck" being used too much by too many people. I am tired of it. What people will come up and say to you is usually very boring. Stop it.

RECENT THINGS

I am feeling really crummy right now. Yes, I am riding. I am drenched with sweat, stink, and have spilled Coke on me. It's sticky. My shoes are dirty and the laces are not exactly white anymore. A friend cut off the short sleeves of his new shirt and I put them on as wrist bands. They need to be washed now. Part of my hair is shorter than others. I just learned 270 footplant (to axles) on curbs. They're fun. I often skate through alleys, run and jump off of objects, and go faster than tough people. I also run over paper cups and shoot my board into telephone poles "no comply" style. I like to pop up off of cracks. If you ever get the chance, look for public transitions. Drink Coke and ride curbs, man.
